LOGIX CHANGES FACILITY SUPPLIES INDUSTRY IN NORTHEAST OHIO

Logix invests in technology, a search for agents, and a new warehouse in Richfield, OH to better service facility supply needs.

Richfield, OH - Logix Supply has changed the traditional method of how companies procure their commercial facility supplies. Through investment in technology, an introduction of a unique compensation package for its agents, and unlimited product sourcing, Logix has modernized a very mature industry.

Utilizing its latest technology platform, Logix agents, as well as their clients, have the ability to place orders directly onsite and at any facility at any time. Proprietary software coupled with the latest handheld devices allows the user to place orders precisely and effortlessly across any platform, eliminate errors, and track historical order data. The same APP-based technology allows the user to place orders online through their newly launched website for even greater convenience.

"We created Logix Supply with the goal of making it easier to purchase facility supplies for all those involved," said Barry Smith, owner and president of Logix. "By investing in proprietary ordering software and equipment, our agents and customers can experience an easy method to purchase any type of facility products. Armed with new technology and unlimited product sourcing, the Logix agent can now take the complexity out of ordering facility supplies.

Logix agents create their own hours at their own pace, and do not believe in cumbersome corporate policies and procedures. No call reports, no quotas. Most important, a positive easy-going culture, exemplified best by its owner. Becoming a Logix agent is the ultimate in entrepreneurship and flexibility, with the potential of unlimited income. What also sets the company apart is a lucrative commission structure. All agents earn an unheard of 50% of gross margin on each order.

"Our goal is to partner with like-minded professionals with entrepreneurial spirit and strong work ethic that want to enjoy a high-paying career with the ultimate in work-life flexibility. Our agents, through their relationships and experience, have the hard part done. Utilizing technology, the actual distribution of our product is the easy part," said Smith. "We are now positioned for rapid growth by making it easy to add quality people interested in leveraging their experience and relationships to sell our facility supplies.”

Logix offers additional services such as inventory management, delivery options, manufacturer support, buying group advantage, and no product limitations. Serving Northeast Ohio through two facilities in Richfield and Columbia Station, OH, Logix is growing and adding to its hundreds of product offerings each day achieving the goal of smarter distribution in facility supply.
